AIRBIQUITY INC.

Kamyar Moinzadeh is the man behind the technology that allows OnStar to provide critical communications services to the owners of General Motors, Lexus and Acura vehicles. As chief executive and president of Airbiquity Inc., Moinzadeh led the development and delivery of Airbiquity's wireless software and modem products into the automotive market. Moinzadeh took over leadership of Airbiquity in 2004 after working with the company for two years as chief technology officer. He took the nine-year-old Seattle company's software from development into production with the world's largest automotive manufacturers.
